? Question

Edit

Should developed countries provide funding to help developing nations address climate change?

A key issue that emerged at the Copenhagen climate talks was whether developing countries would provide financing to help developing nations defray the cost of emission reductions and adaptation. For more, see Financial transfers in climate negotiations

Nalini Kotamraju on the Tension between User-centered Design and E-government Services

Individuals and institutions are slower to adopt e-government services due to a lack of user centricity in design and development. Work with PortNL, an integrated e-government service for expatriates in the Netherlands, suggests the core of governments' difficulty in creating user-centered services lies in a fundamental tension between the needs of users and those of governments. In this talk, Nalini Kotamraju — an Assistant Professor at the University of Twente in the Netherlands — explains how the purposes of e-government services can be met through a user-centered design approach, and how site builders can put the needs of users ahead of the ideas of governmental clients.

Changes at Serious Games.org

Posted by Ben Sawyer on 08-10-19

We're finally, but slowly, getting some changes going on at our site. Please see the new newswire section where we'll try to compile news in a more regular fashion. We also have launched a channel on YouTube (send us video links to add!), a flickr group (feel free to join and add screenshots), as well as a Slideshare and Delicious channel. Our goal is to use these new additions and more in the works to collect, share, and discuss the growing resources and bodies of work now emerging in the serious games field.

Serious Games Taxonomy Shared

Bruno, Former State Leader, Guilty of Corruption

Nathaniel Brooks for The New York Times

Former Senate Majority Leader Joseph L. Bruno left court in Albany on Monday.

By NICHOLAS CONFESSORE and DANNY HAKIM
Published: December 7, 2009

ALBANY — Joseph L. Bruno, the former Senate majority leader who, until his retirement last year, was one of the most powerful figures in New York politics, was found guilty on Monday of concealing hundreds of thousands of dollars in payments from a businessman who sought help from the Legislature.

S4041A Provides for medical use of marihuana

Formats: XML CSV, RSS, JSON

Chuck Rogers 1 week ago

Will this bill be voted on before you convene for the summer? I am chronic pain patient on a high dose of Oxycontin and am dying literally from the side effects.If it were not for marijuana I'd be a dead man.Please get this done befor you all go home and have a pain free summer.I won't.

I guess this will end up in File 13.It is so sad that NY has fallen behind many states that are not even "progressive",like Montana.Too busy fighting amongst themselves to show any compassion to thier many voters who live in fear of arrest for using marijuana.Very sad indeed.I hope you all are ashamed.

Summary

The basic concept is to parse the flat file records from the mainframe into some sort of modern relational or object datastore. This datastore can then be queried via a simple RESTful API to produce output in any number of desired formats or standards – XML (RSS, ATOM, custom schemas), JSON, CSV, HTML (widgets).

RESTful API Path Structure

full output (w/ text and memo fields!):
HTML: /api/1.0/html/bill/{senate or assembly bill id}
JSON: /api/1.0/json/bill/{senate or assembly bill id}
XML: /api/1.0/xml/bill/{senate or assembly bill id}
RSS: XML: /api/1.0/rss/bill/{senate or assembly bill id}
CSV: /api/1.0/csv/bill/{senate or assembly bill id}

Other search paths:
/api/1.0/{format}/committee/{committee name}/{page start } / {page size }
/api/1.0/{format}/search/{free text search of summary, text or memo}/{page start } / {page size }
